1. Product – Who are You

Download CV

2. Price – What you did

Achievement 1:

This is a very good example, also in terms of working under pressure (4 weeks for a complex task). Thinking of your objective of being a teacher, I also found relevant the fact that you were able to target the message to different types of people, with different objectives and motivations. I think this ability to create empathy and being flexible in the approach and in the communication with others is something you can be proud of.

Achievement 2:

Suggestion: think back also to your experience as Talent Development in AIESEC: were you able to connect or to particularly support someone? Did you feel you made a difference in someone else's day? For a professional objective like yours, you don't have to think about major achievements: even the (apparently) small things at a personal level can be very important.

Achievement 3:

See above

3. Place – What you can do

Your objective is very fascinating, and for sure not "traditional" in terms of role and destination. My suggestion would be to investigate the Lebanese education system: if they have a state-based hiring system (like we have in Italy with the "graduatorie", probably it will be an uphill climb). Have you thought about looking for private/international schools (where the teaching language is English) or for language schools (where you could actually teach Italian)?

4. Promotion – Your USP

Those are very good qualities, and they are reflected by the achievement you mentioned above. My only comment is that they are not very distinctive (i.e. someone else can say exactly the same thing). Try to think that you are being interviewed by the director of a Lebanese school for a teacher position: why should they choose

Lorenzo over someone else? What makes a difference? Is it your passion for teaching? your interest in international environments? Your motivation to explore more about the Lebanese culture? We can talk about it more during the live session.
