1. Product – Who are You

Download CV

2. Price – What you did

Achievement 1:

Very good analysis, and a very good success case. Problem solving skills are more and more important nowadays, and I think you showed an entrepreneurial spirit, as well as a creative approach (organizing a challenge). I would definitely mention this in your CV and/or any interview when talking about your experience in AIESEC.

Achievement 2:

Another very good example. To a third person it also shows you do not shy away from challenges, and are also able to network effectively.

Achievement 3:

This episode is different from the other two, but it shows a very important trait of your personality: generosity and altruism. This can be especially important in environments in which you are required to work in a team. Just a word of caution here: it might not be ideal in environments which require to treat confidential data or in which people are not overly friendly...but then again, very likely these environments are not ideal for you!!

3. Place – What you can do

It looks like you have a very clear target and are working in this direction, which is already a head start. My advice would be to state very clearly what you mean by "International relations", what kind of activities you have in mind, simply because the same role can have a different name in different companies. So make sure that when you search for opportunities (either online through job postings or through network) you use all the relevant keywords that can be associated to the job (eg. business development, managing partnerships, talent acquisition...). Also, I agree that having Switzerland in mind and not speaking German and/or French might be an area of weakness. You can choose to focus your research on Canton Ticino, even though Switzerland has recently raised its barriers vs. commuters and foreign workers. My feedback is that you should definitely go ahead with this objective, but consider improving your language knowledge, as it will be necessary to work effectively in Switzerland.

4. Promotion – Your USP

These are very good points. Just be aware that some cultures/countries value different skills in different way (for. eg Anglosaxon countries value more achievements), Scandinavian countries value more soft skills, and German-speaking countries value expertise). Also, keep in mind that, in case of an interview, it is important to answer by expressing the motivation to the job offer.
